Section 1: Company identity and contact details

Homebrewed is provided by baseworks.tech, registered in the Netherlands under Chamber of Commerce number (KvK) 98170643, VAT number NL005312934B1, with postal address Box E1586, Oder 20, 2491 DC Den Haag, Netherlands. In these terms, “baseworks.tech,” “we,” “us” and “our” refer to that provider.

General support questions may be sent to support@baseworks.tech. Privacy questions may be sent to privacy@baseworks.tech.

The current version of these terms and other company policies will be available from the baseworks.tech policies page at <https://www.baseworks.tech/policies/>.

Section 2: Scope and acceptance

These terms apply only to the Homebrewed iOS application with bundle identifier app.homebrewed. They do not govern the baseworks.tech website, online shop, other baseworks.tech software or any future Docker/self-hosted version of Homebrewed.

By downloading, installing, purchasing or using Homebrewed, you agree to these terms. If you do not agree, do not use or purchase the app and remove it from your device.

If you use Homebrewed for or on behalf of another person, household or organization, you confirm that you are authorized to do so and remain responsible for your own use.

Nothing in these terms excludes, restricts or makes conditional a right or remedy that applicable law does not allow us to exclude or restrict. Consumers retain all mandatory protections of the law that applies to them.

Section 3: Apple terms and application licence

Homebrewed is distributed through Apple's App Store. Apps obtained through the App Store are licensed, not sold. Unless baseworks.tech later supplies a custom end-user licence through App Store Connect, the Apple Licensed Application End User License Agreement (the “Apple Standard EULA”) at <https://www.apple.com/legal/internet-services/itunes/dev/stdeula/> governs the licence to install and use Homebrewed.

These Terms of Use supplement the Apple Standard EULA by describing Homebrewed's functionality, purchase model and app-specific conditions. They do not replace the Apple Standard EULA. If these terms conflict with the Apple Standard EULA, Apple's applicable terms or mandatory law, the Apple terms or mandatory law prevail to the extent of that conflict.

Subject to the Apple Standard EULA, these terms and your compliance with them, you may use Homebrewed for personal or internal household purposes on Apple-branded devices that you own or control and as permitted by Apple's usage rules.

Apple is not responsible for Homebrewed or its content, maintenance, support or claims concerning the app except to the extent expressly stated in the Apple Standard EULA or required by law.

Section 4: Trial, purchase and restoration

Homebrewed is a free download. The iOS version offers:

- A free trial lasting seven days from the time the trial is started through the App Store.
- A separate one-time in-app purchase that permanently unlocks Homebrewed for the purchasing Apple Account, subject to Apple's rules and any revocation or refund.

The free trial does not convert automatically into a paid purchase and Homebrewed does not charge a subscription. When the trial ends, adding and editing stop. You can continue to read the meals, recipes, ingredients and products already stored in the app and export a backup. To add or edit again, you must deliberately buy the one-time unlock.

The price and currency shown by the App Store at the time of purchase are the applicable price and currency. Storefront prices, taxes and availability may differ by country or region. Apple handles payment authorization, billing, transaction records and any refund request under Apple's terms and applicable law. baseworks.tech does not receive your payment-card credentials.

The app provides a Restore Purchases control. Restoration depends on Apple recognizing the relevant transaction for the Apple Account and storefront. If Apple reports that a paid transaction was refunded, revoked or otherwise no longer valid, paid functionality may no longer be available.

A StoreKit or App Store connection failure does not authorize a charge by baseworks.tech. The app may temporarily keep functionality available when it cannot obtain a reliable entitlement result.

Section 5: What Homebrewed provides

Homebrewed is an on-device tool for recording meals, maintaining a personal food and recipe catalogue, organizing household food information, setting nutrition goals and comparing nutritional characteristics. It can obtain product information from Open Food Facts and can synchronize local information directly between devices in a deliberately paired household.

The app is designed to operate without a Homebrewed account or baseworks.tech cloud service. The features available in a particular version are those described in the app and its current App Store listing. Screenshots, examples and explanatory text illustrate intended use but are not guarantees that every item of third-party food data will be present or correct.

Section 6: Wellness and nutrition limitations

Homebrewed is a general-wellness and food-journaling tool. It is not a medical device and is not intended to diagnose, prevent, monitor, predict, prognose, treat or alleviate a disease, injury or disability. It does not measure blood glucose, insulin or your body's response to food.

Glycemic index, food insulin index, glycemic load, insulin load and other calculated or displayed values are estimates based on available data and general models. They are not measurements of your personal response and may be incomplete, inaccurate or unsuitable for your circumstances.

Do not use Homebrewed to calculate medication or insulin doses or as a substitute for professional medical advice, diagnosis, treatment, monitoring or emergency assistance. If you manage a health condition, follow your clinician's guidance and your own appropriate measurements, and consult a qualified professional before changing treatment, medication or diet.

Ingredient, allergen and nutrition information can be missing, outdated or wrong, including data obtained from Open Food Facts or entered by a household member. Always check the current product label and obtain appropriate professional advice for allergies, intolerances and other safety decisions.

Section 7: Your content, device and backups

You retain whatever rights you hold in information and images you enter or import into Homebrewed. Because the app has no baseworks.tech account or server, you do not grant baseworks.tech a licence to host that content merely by storing it in the app.

You are responsible for:

- having the right to enter, import, use and share the information and images you place in the app;
- keeping your device, screen lock, Apple Account and exported archives secure;
- reviewing and controlling iOS, Apple or device-manufacturer backup settings that can copy eligible app data or transfer it to another device;
- maintaining an independent export where you need one before deleting the app, resetting data, importing an archive or changing devices; and
- checking important information against an authoritative source before relying on it.

Section 8: Household sharing

Household sharing synchronizes information directly between deliberately paired devices. Every member of the household can see and edit the information shared within it. Join or invite only people whom you intend to give that access.

You are responsible for obtaining any permission needed before adding another person's information or image to a household. Do not use household sharing to disclose information unlawfully or without authority.

Leaving a household stops future synchronization with that household but does not erase information already copied to another member's device. baseworks.tech cannot inspect, control or remotely erase those copies.

Synchronization can be delayed, interrupted or unavailable because of Bluetooth state, permissions, device compatibility, operating-system behaviour, distance, power management or conflicting edits. Review important entries after synchronization and keep an independent export where loss would matter.

Section 9: Open Food Facts and external resources

Homebrewed can query and display information from Open Food Facts, an independent collaborative database. Open Food Facts is not operated or controlled by baseworks.tech. Its availability, data, images and services are governed by its own terms, privacy practices and licences.

Community-supplied product information may be inaccurate, incomplete or outdated. baseworks.tech does not independently verify every Open Food Facts result and does not guarantee its accuracy or fitness for a particular purpose.

The app and its documentation may link to other independent websites or research sources. A link is provided for reference and does not mean that baseworks.tech controls, endorses or guarantees the external service or its current content.

Section 10: Permissions and acceptable use

Homebrewed requests iOS permissions only when required for specific app features. Camera access supports barcode and household QR-code scanning. Bluetooth access supports local household discovery, pairing, and synchronization. Internet access supports Open Food Facts database queries and linked external resources.

You must not use Homebrewed to:

- violate applicable law or another person's rights, privacy or confidentiality;
- store or share content that you do not have the right to use;
- bypass security protections, tamper with household authentication or gain unauthorized access to another device;
- introduce malicious code, interfere with the app's operation or misuse external services reached through the app;
- misrepresent Homebrewed output as a medical measurement, diagnosis or professional instruction; or
- reverse engineer, decompile or disassemble the proprietary parts of the app except to the extent that applicable law or an applicable open-source licence expressly permits it.

This section does not prohibit activity protected by mandatory law, including lawful security research or reverse engineering necessary to achieve interoperability where those rights cannot be waived.

Section 11: Intellectual property and third-party software

Homebrewed's proprietary software, design, documentation, branding and original content are owned by baseworks.tech or its licensors. No ownership right is transferred to you. Rights not expressly granted by the Apple Standard EULA, these terms or mandatory law are reserved.

Homebrewed includes independently developed software, fonts, icons and open data governed by their own licences. Those licences continue to apply to the corresponding material and prevail over these terms where they grant rights that these terms do not. The current notices are identified in the Homebrewed - Licenses and Acknowledgements on Apple Platforms document available on the baseworks.tech policies page.

“Homebrewed,” “baseworks.tech,” “iOS,” “App Store,” “Apple,” “Open Food Facts” and other third-party names and marks identify their respective products, services or owners. Their use does not imply endorsement or sponsorship.

Section 12: Updates, availability and support

We may provide bug fixes, security changes, compatibility changes and feature updates through the App Store. Updates may change or remove functionality where reasonably necessary for security, legal compliance, platform compatibility, service availability or product development. Some updates may require a supported iOS version or device.

A one-time unlock is not a promise that every feature or external service will remain unchanged or available forever. It is not a subscription and does not include a guaranteed support period, service-level agreement, cloud service or future feature set. Mandatory obligations to provide conformity or security updates remain unaffected.

We may stop offering new downloads or updates where continued distribution becomes unlawful, unsafe, technically impracticable or commercially discontinued. This does not remove remedies that applicable consumer law provides.

Reasonable support for Homebrewed is available at support@baseworks.tech. Unless mandatory law or a separate written agreement requires otherwise, no response time, resolution time or continuous availability level is promised.

Section 13: Warranties and liability

Homebrewed is supplied subject to the warranties and remedies that cannot lawfully be excluded, including applicable consumer conformity rights and the provisions of the Apple Standard EULA.

To the maximum extent permitted by law, Homebrewed and its third-party information are provided “as is” and “as available.” We do not warrant that the app will be uninterrupted, error-free or compatible with every device or future operating-system version, or that food, nutrition, calculation, synchronization or external-service information will always be complete or accurate.

To the maximum extent permitted by law, baseworks.tech is not liable for indirect, incidental, special or consequential loss, or for loss arising solely from inaccurate user-entered or third-party food information, failure to maintain a backup, unauthorized household access, or use of the app contrary to Section 6.

Nothing in these terms excludes or limits liability for fraud, wilful misconduct, death or personal injury caused by negligence, breach of a mandatory consumer obligation, or any other liability that cannot legally be excluded or limited. Any limitation is reduced to the minimum extent necessary to comply with applicable law.

Section 14: Privacy

The Homebrewed - Privacy and Data Protection Policy on Apple platforms explains how the iOS application handles information, including local storage, Open Food Facts requests, permissions, household sharing, purchases, exports and deletion. The current policy will be available from the baseworks.tech policies page.

Section 15: Suspension and termination

You may stop using Homebrewed at any time and remove it from your device. Removing the app does not by itself cancel or refund an App Store transaction; refund requests are handled through Apple subject to its terms and applicable law.

Your licence rights may terminate under the Apple Standard EULA if you fail to comply with its terms. We may also exercise remedies available under these terms or applicable law for a material breach, but Homebrewed's local-only design does not provide baseworks.tech with a general remote account-suspension mechanism.

Sections concerning intellectual property, third-party licences, warranty limitations, liability, governing law and accrued rights continue to apply after use ends where their nature requires it.

Section 16: Changes to these terms

We may publish revised terms for future versions or future use of Homebrewed. Each version will show its published date, effective date and version number on the baseworks.tech policies page.

Where a change materially affects existing users, we will provide an appropriate notice through the app, its release notes or another reasonable channel before the change takes effect where required. A later version does not retrospectively remove a right or remedy that has already arisen under mandatory law.

Section 17: Governing law and disputes

These terms and the relationship between you and baseworks.tech are governed by Dutch law.

If you are a consumer, you also retain the protection of mandatory law in the country where you habitually reside when that law applies. You may bring proceedings in any court made available by mandatory jurisdiction rules.

Before starting formal proceedings, please contact support@baseworks.tech with a clear description of the issue so that we can try to resolve it. This request does not prevent you from using a court, regulator, alternative dispute-resolution procedure or other remedy available under applicable law, and it does not shorten a legal limitation period.

The governing-law and forum provisions of Apple's own agreements continue to govern the matters those agreements cover.

Section 18: General provisions

If a provision of these terms is unlawful or unenforceable, it will be read down to the minimum extent necessary or severed, and the remaining provisions continue to apply.

A delay or failure to enforce a right does not waive that right. We may assign our rights and obligations as part of a transfer of the Homebrewed product or our business, provided that doing so does not reduce a consumer's mandatory rights.

These terms, the Homebrewed Privacy Policy, the Homebrewed Licenses and Acknowledgements document, and the applicable Apple agreements form the terms relevant to use of the iOS app. Except for Apple as provided in the Apple Standard EULA and any person protected by mandatory law, these terms do not create enforcement rights for a third party.

Section 19: Governing language

The authoritative version of these terms is English. A translation may be supplied for convenience. If a translation differs from the English version, the English version prevails to the extent permitted by applicable law. Mandatory language requirements remain unaffected.
